

Protect Your Air Conditioner This Winter

Why should you cover your air conditioner?

Your air conditioner is an investment that should bring you years of cool relaxing comfort through the "scorching, sweaty months". Repeated beatings by the nature (ice, snow, sleet, salty sea air) and build-up of debris (leaves, twigs, pine needles, pine cones, acorns, etc.) in and around your unit decreases efficiency causes damage and over the years will lead to the components becoming rusted and corroded. By protecting that investment not only do you insure a longer life for your air conditioner, you insure that it works at its optimal efficiency throughout its entire lifetime - keeping you cool and saving you money. By keeping your air conditioner unit clean and protected you save money in a number of different ways:

- You extend the life of your unit.
- You increase the efficiency of your unit - By keeping the condensing coil cleaner you allow it to run at peak efficiency, which not only improves the operation but also reduces your energy bills.
- You decrease maintenance costs - Keep your unit cleaner, and protected means you have less that needs to be cleaned out, fixed or replaced.
